

Polling - SA Climate ambition

April 2019

Key Results

The Australia Institute surveyed a state representative sample of 624 South Australians about their attitudes to climate change.

The results show support for a wide range of ambitious climate policies and broad agreement that climate change is serious, and can and should be addressed. Most respondents disagreed with statements that what Australia does will make no difference and that we should be less worried about climate change.

Respondents were asked whether they support or oppose a variety of ambitious policies to tackle climate change.

- Every policy had greater overall support from respondents than opposition.
  - Support was greatest for stopping any more native forest logging and reforesting other areas (76% overall support, 10% overall oppose).
  - Support was highest among Greens (89%), ALP (75%) and CA (70%) voters; yet every party and demographic had more support than opposition.
- Two –thirds (65%) supported a rapid transition to 100% renewable energy, including a majority of all demographics.
  - PHON (49% overall support, 32% overall oppose) and LNP (51% overall support, 37% overall oppose) voters were more likely to support than oppose.
- Almost three times more respondents (58% overall support, 20% overall oppose) supported a large publicly funded research program into zero-carbon industry and agriculture.
  - More than half of LNP (52%), ALP (64%), CA (62%), and Greens (79%) supported the policy.
- Half of Australians supported no new coal mines constructed (53%), and a majority supported no new exploration for new deposits of coal, oil or gas (46%).
  - More Greens, ALP, LNP and CA voters supported no new coal mines being constructed than opposed it.

Respondents were then presented with a series of statements relating to climate change.

All statements in support of taking ambitious action on climate change received majority agreement.

All statements opposing ambition on climate change received majority disagreement.

- Statements which were met with overall agreement were

- That strong government action is needed to rapidly reduce greenhouse gas emissions and transform Australia's economy to one that is zero-carbon (71% overall agree, 16% overall disagree);
- That we already have the solutions we need to stop dangerous climate change and that the only thing stopping us is the politics (62% overall agree, 20% overall disagree);
- That Australia is facing a climate change emergency and should take emergency action (59% overall agree, 26% overall disagree);
- We could stabilise our climate if governments took on the mission of building a zero-carbon economy (54% overall agree, 21% overall disagree).

Interestingly over half of respondents (53%) also agreed that governments should mobilise all of society to tackle climate change, in a mobilisation similar to that during the world wars.

This shows an understanding of and desire for drastic action, but that political will may be limiting it. Respondents reflected these concerns when asked about the scale of political action needed to address climate change.

- Despite 62% agreeing that we have the solutions but our politics are stopping action, nearly as many respondents also agreed that we don't know how to take strong action on climate change (57% overall agree, 28% overall disagree).

Respondents gave a mixed response when asked whether tackling climate change will require only modest changes to Australia's economy (38% overall agree, 41% overall disagree).

- It is especially significant that many respondents disagreed only modest changes are needed, but still supported these required changes.

- Statements which were met with overall disagreement were

- Fewer than three in 10 respondents agreed that what Australia does on climate change will make no difference (28% overall agree, 60% overall disagree);
- That strong action on climate change would leave us worse off (25% overall agree, 55% overall disagree);
- Less than a quarter of respondents agreed that we should be less worried about climate change (22% overall agree, 67% overall disagree).

Method

The Australia Institute conducted a survey of 624 South Australians between 20 February 2019 and 4 March 2019, online through Dynata (formerly Research Now), post-weighted to reflect social demographics by age and gender in South Australia.

Voting crosstabs show voting intentions for the lower house. Those who were undecided were asked which way they were leaning; these leanings are included in voting intention crosstabs, but results are also shown separately for undecideds. “LNP” includes separate responses for Liberal and National.
